

Nonprofit Organizations

Nonprofit organizations are a significant and growing part of the U.S. economy. Increasing need for services continues to outpace the nonprofit sector's ability to fill the demand, while state and local governments rely on nonprofits to address areas government budgets can no longer support. In addition, nonprofits face a complex regulatory environment and greater competition for funding, talent and leadership. To address these challenges, nonprofits are looking toward innovative methods of service delivery, funding strategies, and network building and engagement.
