

Environmental & Natural Resources Law

Few firms view their Environment and Natural Resources practices as core legal services. Stoel Rives is one of the few. The firm ranks #8 in the United States according to Law360's list of the largest environmental law practices. Our sophisticated compliance counseling, permitting, regulatory development and litigation practices continue a long tradition of specialization and deep experience. Our environmental and natural resource lawyers incorporate prior agency experience, technical acumen and industry knowledge into their legal advice. They also build strong relationships with agency officials and industry associations. Our litigation successes include landmark decisions. More than 60 attorneys, paralegals and compliance analysts comprise our firm-wide practice group and rank among the top practitioners in the nation.

“Clients are looking for something beyond just regulatory knowledge. They want agency relationships, they want industry experience, and they want judgment,” says Krista K. McIntyre, practice group leader. “On top of that our clients want advisors who can work along side their in-house environmental professionals to achieve their business’ goals.”
